

I recently read in a recent communication from the Governor of the State of NJ that the NJ Do Not Call list law may be subject to challenge by the FCC because it may be more stringent than the federal law. I have experienced a substantial drop in such unwanted calls and am satisfied that the law is adequate as written. Surely you can not be interested in allowing substantial nuisance calls to those that have requested that they be stopped. Please explain what rights you might possibly believe are being infringed upon. We don't want these phone calls! Why can't we choose to stop them?
